small lie”

TELEPHONE GAME

“She’ll never find out”

TELEPHONE GAME

“Where
were you
last night?”

TELEPHONE GAME

“I thought you were my friend”

TELEPHONE GAME

“You really thought you got away
with it”

TELEPHONE GAME

“How much is this going to cost me?”

TELEPHONE GAME

“I Know
who did it”

TELEPHONE GAME

“I Knew
you’d call me”

TELEPHONE GAME

“Don’t blame
me for your mistake”

TELEPHONE GAME

“I’ve got a confession to make”

TELEPHONE GAME

The following cards can be used for developing a telephone improvisation in the classroom. The line given on the card should be the opening line or one of the early lines in a telephone conversation. The line should suggest to the pupils the scenario for the improvisation and who is on the other end of the line. The pupil has to imagine what the person on the other end of the line is saying, leave a gap for them to speak and react to what they are saying.

The pupil randomly selects one of the cards for the telephone improvisation. I had a rule that you could put a card back if you didn't like it and choose another, but you then had to stick with the second choice – this made pupils really think about putting back a card. The pupils could prepare the conversation in advance to start, but as they become more proficient, they could then just make it up "on the spot". It may help to set a time limit on the improvisation as some pupils will need to be curtailed while others may need to be encouraged to keep the conversation going a little longer.

The improvisations just need a mobile phone or an old-style telephone and a small space at the top of the classroom.

The aim of the improvisation should be on getting a conversation going and the ability of the pupil to "think on their feet" in reacting to what the other person is saying. The aim should be the development of fluency of thought and speech and the ability of the pupil to speak confidently and in character. The focus should also be on the elements of drama – setting, characters, use of voice, facial expression, gesture, body posture, tension/conflict etc.

Pupils may need to be reminded that you want to hear them speak as they act out the scenario, so it will not work if they just laugh their way through the telephone improvisation.

Most of all, this improvisation game should be fun!
